Lexical encapsulation of one entity inside another
One relation uses another to achieve functionality
One class subclasses another
A class implements a given interface
One method calls another
One entity throws another as an exception
A method returns an entity
A class overrides a method
One entity overloads a method
One entity instantiates another via the 'new' keyword
A method call assigns a value to a field
A field holds an entity of a given type
A method receives an entity as an input parameter
An entity reads a field